Interventions, Presentations and an Exhibition

The last month has been a hive of activity for the Newport Project with the artists and students continuing their creative work, studies and community consultation to offer ideas to make Paine Reserve even better.

On the 19th January, despite a sweltering 42°C forecast, students from the Newport Project placemaking studio temporarily transformed Paine Reserve into a fun and interactive space. This included a jumping castle, interactive activities for kids, the painting of paths and free Leroy's coffee. Curious locals took advantage of the playful interventions whilst engaging with the students to help imagine possible new futures for Paine Reserve.

Just two weeks later the students gathered at the Community Hub for the second artist consultation and a 'Presentation of Ideas'. This was an opportunity for the artists and students to not only give a preview of their Newport Project ideas and concepts to each other, but also to members of the Hobsons Bay City Council. Designs incorporated feedback received from the community including water play areas, shade, seating, performance spaces and train-inspired playgrounds. "There was a lot of talent in the room," says the project's creative director, Donna Jackson, "as during the afternoon, artists, students, academics and Council staff exchanged ideas. Several people told me how unusual and inspiring this process has been.”

These ideas will now form part of an exhibition opening on 21 February at The Substation, Newport. This is an opportunity for the public to not only view the work, but also meet the artists and design students, be inspired by their concepts and to offer ideas of their own on how to make Paine Reserve a vibrant and engaging public space for locals of all ages.

You can get involved by:

- Attending the exhibition of artists and students concepts from Wednesday 21st February 2018 at The Substation, Newport and recording your thoughts (further details below)

Introducing award-winning artist: Bindi Cole Chocka, Photographer and New Media Artist

Multi award-winning artist, Bindi Cole Chocka, is an ingenious Melbourne-born photographer, new media artist, writer, curator and one of the local artists offering ideas for the Newport Project.

Bindi's work speaks compellingly through her photographs, videos, installations and writing. It often references her life story and experiences, such as her heritage, the importance of Christianity in her life, and the impact of politics and the law on her, her family and community. She subtly but powerfully reveals some uncomfortable truths about the fundamental disconnection between who we are - the communities and identities by which we shape our sense of self - and how the prevailing culture attempts to place and define us.

Since her first solo show in 2007, Bindi's work has been widely exhibited in solo and group exhibitions including the National Gallery of Victoria, Art Gallery of NSW, Museum of Contemporary Art and Queensland Gallery of Modern Art. Her work is also held in various collections across the world.

Currently a PhD candidate at Deakin University, Bindi has describes her involvement in the Newport Project as “a fantastic way to transform Newport through the arts!”

Bindi's ideas will feature as part of the exhibition on show 21-23 February 2018 at The Substation, Newport.
